Eerie mum who died days after losing three babies tells of horrors she saw at hospital By Daniel Tarade BBC News, Lagos The troubled life of Ebere Moronke didn't end with the birth of her first child in 2008. Her live in-laws have been shunned by family members, she has lost three babies and she has been told she will not be able to have more children. But this pregnancy is different. It's her husband's first wife's thirtieth birthday. For the past few months, Mrs Moronke, 36, has been going to the clinic almost every day. And she can hardly stand the waiting. She has three babies in her womb: she hopes they will be born healthy and stay with her. After the births she doesn't go back to the clinic, but she doesn't want to lose the chance of giving birth there. The family already hates her, and it does so because of her pregnancy. Of the 17 million Nigerian women who get pregnant each year, some will struggle to get the medical care they need, usually in a public facility. But the free maternity care available at public hospitals is a myth. A study released in February by the World Bank in collaboration with the Child Health Epidemiology Reference Group (CHERG) found that there were often problems with doctors and patient counselling. Any pregnant woman, whatever her age, is entitled to the same services Journal Editors "Government policies for obstetric care are promoting myths and gross underprovision of essential services," they said. A couple of months ago, there were three babies in her uterus. Mrs Moronke was not told about her other two pregnancies, she just felt pain. "I wasn't working, so I thought it was just stomach pain, but when the period came, I learnt that I was pregnant again," she says. "And when I realised that I was pregnant again, I was very scared. I had bad thoughts, bad thoughts. I was so scared I couldn't think at all. "I went to the clinic about three times before the birth, and the doctors told me I had already delivered two babies. But at the time I was delivering my third child, I went to the clinic and they told me I was not pregnant. They said I couldn't get pregnant any more. It's true. I cannot have any more babies. "I didn't know what to do. I tried to keep it to myself because I had never told anyone about it. I
