But Photoshop Elements isn't just for experts. Here are 9 tips for using Photoshop Elements: 1. Beginner tips If you've never used Photoshop Elements before, you may think Photoshop is the most complicated program ever. That's why you should start with a simple design. The basic toolbox has a lot of features and options. It's also pretty easy to use – mostly anyone can learn Photoshop Elements in a day or two. Start with the basics and learn how to use Photoshop Elements the right way. You don't need to know how to make the perfect fruit salad – just learn the basics and get good at editing. 2. Ready for more? If you learn Photoshop Elements, you'll be able to edit photos as well as most professionals. You'll also be able to create your own graphic designs. If you want to learn more advanced features, you'll find plenty of tutorials and training for Photoshop Elements. 3. Create your first image Before starting with the Photoshop Elements, you should learn the basics of digital photography. Start by researching the different shooting modes and the best ways to take a good photo. Also make sure to read good tutorials on how to create the perfect photo, how to edit photos in Photoshop Elements, and other useful tips. This can help you understand what you're doing, how to improve your skills and how to edit photos.

4. Design for the web It's hard to tell you everything you need to know to design for the web. But I'll try to describe some of the most common design topics you'll encounter. First, when you create your first web design, it's easy to get lost in the drawing tools and forget about organizing the text layers. It's very important to have things organized in a way that makes sense. It could be a good idea to design the website first, and then add everything after you've organized the text. You can always add extra layers later. The PSD file is the basic type of file you'll need for creating a website. Photoshop Elements lets you save your work in a PSD file, and it's the perfect format for web designers. The PSD file saves the texts and other layers organized in a way that's easy to save and export into HTML.

Tuesday, December 22, 2012 Alas, I am not available on Christmas Day. So, I figured that, if I am not on the air, maybe I'll be online. That was a bad assumption on my part. I'm at my sister's house, and we are trying to get up to our cabin for the weekend. Driving is just not happening for me. Mom-to-be me is on the verge of a serious meltdown, and everything is slowing down to a halt. Sorry! So, instead, I am offering up some oldies but goodies -- 50 tunes to get you through the week. I am starting with Bon Jovi, however, because I've had the itch to play something from The Cars' Rental Car, and they're not on this list. You'll notice the year on the side of the button next to the artist. It's the year that the record was originally released. I may lose some of you in the shuffle, and if I do, I apologize in advance. So, here are some sounds to help you get through the week, starting with a '60s cover from The Association: The Association -- (Somewhere in the Middle) You need to start now Because when you're older, this moment Will seem like A wasted moment And the one from Neil Young's "Everybody Knows This Is Nowhere" -- "A saint can wear a suit and tie. But a saint can't get a job. Can't get a home, Just can't pay the rent. Can't get a woman, All he has is a car. I'm a no-good father There's nothin' in this world I haven't tried So I guess I must be the person You are looking for." Today's G&P Driveby is a salute to "Merry Christmas, Darling." I like the Holiday classic so much, I included four songs on the record. So that's it for today. It's good to be back. I hope you have a safe and happy Holiday! Welcome I'm Todd Paull, owner of KLIN. I'm a southern singer-songwriter and a radio host. I don't like country music, but I do like country radio. You should, too. If you like it, that is.

-associated P-loop, in which basic residues are strictly conserved, have also been identified in the F-box ([@b0015], [@b0020]). Here we demonstrate that F-box protein FAM104A contains a basic residue in the P-loop that is essential for its degradation. The fate of this family member strongly suggests that the majority of F-box proteins are degraded via ubiquitin-mediated protein degradation. To our surprise, the conserved P-loop, which is responsible for recognition of the target protein by the F-box protein, in FAM104A is different from all the other characterized F-box proteins. Proteins containing RxxR ([@b0015]) and \[R/K\]xx\[K/R\] ([@b0035]) sequences are known to be recognized by F-box proteins, where the second and last letter indicate the basic residue preferred by the F-box protein for P-loop recognition ([@b0160]). The majority of the characterized P-loop sequences contain a basic residue, such as Arg or Lys (Fig. 4{ref-type="fig"}A), but these are mostly conserved for a protein family. The Xxx\[N,D,Y\]xxRxxxR motif of FAM104A is unique, and has never been identified before. The basic residue, Lys20, is critical for the FAM104A degradation, as a Lys to Ala substitution and a Lys to Gln substitution failed to degrade the protein, indicating that the Lys residue alone is essential for the FAM104A degradation (Fig. 4{ref-type="fig"}B). In addition, different from other F-box protein family members, FAM104A has a conserved N-terminal region of unknown function. In FAM104A, this region is also crucial for the protein to be degraded

(Fig. 4{ref-type="fig"}C). Therefore, FAM104A is a new type of F-box protein and its function is closely related to the regulation of cell morphogenesis and cell proliferation.
