EA Sports has developed an advanced engine that is powered by Player Impact Engine (PIE). PIE simulates the physical environment of the sport of football, giving players and teams their own individual characteristics, including character traits and characteristics that can be reproduced through game play. PIE is the single most powerful feature in FIFA 22. It is used to create player intelligence on the pitch that reflects their individual play style, the actions they typically perform and their body types, such as height and wingspan. In addition, PIE is used to create more physically accurate collision physics, dynamic collisions between the ball and the players and realistic movement cues. The new engine delivers a more realistic simulation for players, which makes them feel more life-like. The engine also allows FIFA 22 to be played at 1080p/60fps for the first time, and the high-definition PIE cameras provide more detailed gameplay captures than ever before. As a result, players may feel more connected to their game environment. The overhauled engine has allowed EA SPORTS to build many new features, such as weather, new pitch textures, more realistic lighting and unique player appearances. One of the new features that will impact gameplay the most is the introduction of a new new engine's Player AI, or "Behavioral AI" feature, which allows EA Sports to more accurately replicate the play-by-play style of world-renowned referees. As a result, FIFA 22 will introduce a new refereeing system that offers an intuitive and natural control and guidance to players, which helps them get better decisions and referee calls. Other new features include live trivia, updated injury diagnoses, improved match pacing, improved two-man opposition set pieces and improved passing. This is followed by improved building AI, enhanced graphical improvements and more realistic styles and player performances. In addition, major gameplay refinements have been made to improve the overall speed of gameplay and fluidity of the team, while shooting mechanics have been enhanced to increase shots on target, decrease misses and improve ball control. In the goalkeepers section, FIFA 22 introduces "Goalkeeper Dodge," which enables full-body, 360-degree movement. Goalkeepers can also more easily lean outwards, towards the sideline, which improves performance in difficult situations and makes them more realistic in the game's match engine. Other gameplay improvements include contextual goals; direct free kicks; new off-ball techniques; crossing
