Clinton Township residents gathered recently to talk about school funding, and they now have a better understanding of where that money could be going. It's a topic that's troubled many residents of the northeast Michigan township in recent years, especially after lawmakers passed a new school funding plan last summer that raised taxes for other states and municipalities to fund school aid. The new law, which took effect this year, is an annual property tax increase that will generate $5.7 million in additional money for the Clinton Township District Library. The Library Board voted to accept the increase and the board of education voted to put it toward teacher salaries, but many residents didn't understand what that meant. "I'm amazed that people here are unaware of what's going on," said John Tucci, who lives in the township. "If the state is giving the library money, how much is it giving them?" As the tax year approached
