This spring simulates a reverberator, which is commonly used in the electronic music industry to add depth, movement and space to both instruments and vocals. The effect can be subtle or dramatic, depending on how the parameters are set. The audio signal input is passed to the spring which creates the resonance, passing it back through. FEATURES: - 1x6 springs - 8 sound types (48 presets) - 8 pan & balance (max. -90 / +90) - 8 stereo spread (max. -90 / +90) - Wet / Dry mix (max. 50 / 0%) - Sound pressure level (max. -70 dB) - I/O bus (in/out) - Input and output mono - User interface - Hot keys - Advanced MIDI mapping - 24-bit / 48 kHzLiving with Inflammatory Bowel Disease: A Qualitative Study of Perceptions and Experiences Among Adults With Inflammatory Bowel Disease. We conducted an exploratory study to better understand the experiences and perceptions of living with inflammatory bowel disease (IBD). Participants were recruited using random-digit-dialing (RDD) in order to (a) identify and recruit participants who had been diagnosed with Crohn's disease or ulcerative colitis within the previous 2 years and (b) recruit them to participate in an in-depth telephone qualitative study. Participants were contacted by the interviewer and informed about the study verbally and by the email and telephone. Participants were enrolled in the study if they lived in the geographic area of the state of Georgia and were able to answer interview questions in English. A total of 33 participants with IBD were enrolled, with the majority having a diagnosis of Crohn's disease (n = 25), and the others (n = 4) having ulcerative colitis. Participants ranged in age from 22 to 86 (median 52). Most participants (60%) were African American. All but 1 were male. Four main themes emerged from the interviews: (a) "What's the diagnosis?" (b) "What do I do about the everyday stress?" (c) "What do I do to have hope?" (d) "You can't avoid it." The theme of "What do I do about the everyday stress?" described the stressors related to having IBD. The main stressors were the symptoms associated with being newly diagnosed, the treatments, and the diet. The theme "Hope is not an option"
