A: According to it appears Nittr.or.jp is the site in question. I checked their dating for you. Site ID: 27: Description: i2BI-01.01.0; Construction Date: i2BI-01.01-2016.10.13; i2BI-01.01.01-2017.01.15 Samples are from the initial phase (IDS #1). No secondary phases from IDS #2. Overall, it looks like a good site. In addition to the Nittr.or.jp site, there are quite a few others that look promising. I will add them to my answer when I have time. Here's the first one I found, I haven't looked at it, but it looks promising: ID: 3308: Description: UB-00.09.0.01; Construction Date: UB-00.09.0-2028.07.20 Sample are from the initial (IDS #1). No secondary phases from IDS #2. Overall, it looks like a good site. Olivia Arodes Olivia Arodes (born 27 January 1980) is a Japanese-born Australian sprint canoer and kayaker. Arodes was born in Tsuruga, Fukui, Japan and moved to Perth, Australia at the age of three, with her family. She took up kayaking when she was twelve years old, and competed in kayak sprint events at Western Australian schoolgirl level. She was an Australian Institute of Sport scholarship holder. Arodes competed in the K-2 500 m event at the 2004 Summer Olympics in Athens. She had six boats hit by other boats while attempting to change lanes during the heats, and her boat was damaged in the subsequent semi final. She came in 17th, after the initial heat, with a time of 30.118 seconds. In 2005, Arodes was part of the Kayaking team at the World Championships which finished 8th overall. They won two silver and three bronze medals and Arodes finished 10th in the K-2 500 m event.
