converging to sum of series In measure theory, we define the sum of a sequence  $(x_n)_{n \in \mathbb{N}}$  to be  $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \sum_{k=0}^n x_k$ . On the other hand, if a series  $\sum_{k=0}^{\infty} a_k$  is bounded, then  $a_k$  converges to  $0$  as  $k \rightarrow \infty$ . Therefore, one possible interpretation of  $\lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \sum_{k=0}^n x_k = \sum_{k=0}^{\infty} a_k$  is, intuitively, that the sum of any sequence converging to the sum of a series, converges to the sum of the series. e79caf774b

This is my code: `def parser(filename): with open('/tmp/file.txt', 'r') as fh: reader = fh result = [] for line in reader: result.append(line.rstrip(' ')) return result filename = '/tmp/file.txt' res = parser(filename) print(res)` For some reasons, when I use `print(res)`, I get the right output as ['some data'] However, when I want to use `res` for any other purpose, it just returns empty list. How can I get the list of values from file? A: Try: `import ast def parser(filename): with open(filename, 'r') as fh: content = ast.literal_eval(fh.read()) return content filename = '/tmp/file.txt' res = parser(filename) print(res)` `res` will be a dict, as you said. `ast.literal_eval()` will attempt to figure out what kind of content you are passing, and if that content can be converted to the correct type (dict, list, tuple, int, float,...) `ast.literal_eval()` will do the conversion for you. You can also iterate over the dict or return it like so:

The following code is what I am attempting to use: var image; var imageArray = new Array(image); And inside a function, I am attempting to add images to the imageArray variable like this: function loadImages() { var im = new Image(); im.onload = function() { image = this; imageArray[0] = im; } im.src = "image1.jpg"; imageArray[1] = im; im.src = "image2.jpg"; imageArray[2] = im; } This will create three separate images inside my array, but I want it to work the same way, but add images dynamically. I know I can create the images inside my function, but i am not quite sure how to format the code inside the onload function. A: Without seeing the rest of your code, I'm guessing you could do this: var image; var imageArray = new Array(); function loadImages() { var im = new Image(); im.onload = function() { image = this; imageArray.push(image); } im.src = "image1.jpg"; im.src = "image2.jpg"; } This adds each image to the array one at a time when the function is run. You could also run the function every time you add a new image to the array. See JSFiddle
