A: Use a subquery: select key,date from table where date in (select date from table where date = 2 group by date) So you run your query, and, as a result, obtain key, and date which appear in result set for a particular date. You could also use a JOIN: select key,date from table_with_dates where date = 2 join table on table.key = table_with_dates.key Q: Counting the number of callouts (with no matching string) Is there an easy way to count the number of callouts in a particular table? Every where I have looked, the simplest answer is a cursor of some sort. I know that there's a Global Variable called CalloutCount that gets incremented every time a callout is made. I thought that I could just use this for my purposes, but I have a table with over a million rows, and that variable will not help me. Does anyone know of an easy way to accomplish this with something more reasonable? I have several different versions of the table, and I am looking to find a way to generalize it rather than just find it in each table. A: Try this SELECT count(*) AS count FROM callout WHERE NOT EXISTS(SELECT * FROM [table] WHERE callout.[name] = callout.name) The trick is to use the NOT EX 0cc13bf012
