The best way to prepare for using Photoshop, and graphic editing in general, is to study the manual. You may read it online or print it out. There is a how-to DVD that is best if you don't want to wait for it to arrive at your house or have limited access to a computer. Finding the resources to help with your craft Discovering how to use Photoshop can be a bit overwhelming. Rather than try to do it all on your own, many photographers work with a graphic designer or a local newspaper art department to complete their images. That way, your images will be printed in a professional, clean manner. You may discover that the graphics department of your local newspaper has a professional illustrator on staff. Photoshop is a computer tool, so a trained graphic artist can do his or her job more efficiently using Photoshop as a tool to make it happen. After you decide which technique you want to use, here are two publications you can read to find a local artist: The Photographer's Source Book/Graphic Artists Guild (www.gag.org): This guide offers an overview of painting techniques and a basic introduction to Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop Essentials/Elements of Visual Communication (www.adobe.com): This book is a nice overview of the Photoshop program and includes tutorials on using Photoshop's features to illustrate the stories. Figure 14-1 shows a sample of a publication with images that were done for a local restaurant that created a newsletter for us using Photoshop. Because the technique they had was limited, they found a local artist to create the images and ultimately printed the publication. Photoshop can be a powerful tool, but also a dangerous one. You must be careful how you use it. The great thing about it is that you don't have to have a degree in art to create an image, but you can use it to create one. Photoshop has almost limitless potential, and I encourage you to experiment with it. Start small and gradually build up to your next use. Figure 14-1: Our restaurant newsletter was done in Photoshop. Looking at what you're working with Photoshop is a bit of an odd program in that you are creating and manipulating a raster image file, but the program itself doesn't know what the image is meant to represent. Most designers choose to use a photograph or a drawing (vector art), but you can manipulate your image with

The present invention relates to a new and distinct cultivar of Osteospermum plant botanically known as Osteospermum ecklonis and hereinafter referred to by the cultivar name 'Balsomin'. The new cultivar is the product of a planned breeding program conducted by the inventor in Enkhuizen, Netherlands. The breeding program commenced in 2001. The objective of the breeding program is to develop Osteospermum cultivars with compact growth habit and numerous small dark-colored flowers. The new Osteospermum cultivar is the product of a cross-pollination made by the inventor in Enkhuizen, Netherlands of the proprietary female Osteospermum ecklonis breeding selection designated '02-0032-1', not patented, as the male or pollen parent. The cultivar 'Balsomin' was discovered and selected by the inventor as a single flowering plant within the progeny of the stated cross-pollination in a controlled environment in Enkhuizen, Netherlands in 2002. Asexual reproduction of the new cultivar by terminal stem cuttings since 2003 in Enkhuizen, Netherlands, has demonstrated that the new cultivar reproduces true to type with all of the characteristics, as herein described, firmly fixed and retained through successive generations of such asexual propagation. The US-based company is reported to have reached a deal to take on the carhoys (the horse-drawn carts that transport goods at that period) in a five-year pilot project to reduce traffic congestion and provide a cleaner and greener alternative to cabs and car services. The project can provide 1,000 jobs for drivers who will operate the so-
