Cheat RF Online.Q: When did the name "Bedouin" come to be used as a name for a military unit? Bedouin (from Arabic بضولان, meaning "shepherds") is often used as a name for an Arab military unit in order to distinguish them from other Arab soldiers. This use of Bedouin was used during the 19th and early 20th centuries, but has not been used since that time. However, it is still used today when it is convenient to distinguish the term Bedouin. The Bedouin diaspora is a major problem for Israeli military officials. A: The name for the unit appears in the Egypt-Israel War of 1956, in the description of the Egyptian side's cavalry unit, the 20th Cavalry Brigade. It is not, however, mentioned in any English-language sources, which seems somewhat surprising as Bedouin is something of a sore point in the region. He could not understand why the Bedouin were reviled. He thought that they were very brave indeed and showed much heroism and endurance. However, the Wikipedia article on Bedouin units in the Arab armies suggests that this name is standard, including in the Egyptian Army. Furthermore, the name has an interesting history - there is an account of its origins on the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn's website. It is derived from the term 'bħdūn', which means 'shepherd' or 'stepfather', 'by way of a derivative of 'bħdūth', which in turn is derived from the Arabic 'ibadah', and means an 'one who takes initiative' or a 'leader'.[
