Information Video Play Button Videos you might like Leafing through the paperwork you'll be handed as you enter the Wild, you'll see hundreds of words listing the resources which were used to make your visit possible. But it doesn't stop there. As you move through the twisting alleys to the left of the main hall, you'll pass a number of information boards, each devoted to a particular aspect of the park. Some describe the history of the park, others explain the processes of how the park developed and still others provide an insight into the workings of the park itself. At the end of the first path you'll come to a small cluster of mist-shrouded sculptures. A stoney circle surrounding a cairn, this is the centre of the park, it's here that visitors are most likely to be reminded that they are, in fact, on a national park site. But it's more than just a convenient point for those who want to go back to the main hall. The park has been designed for, and based on, the workings of the human mind, with little purpose designed into the maze of paths. If you're nervous about disorientating yourself, there's a program of tours which can help; each walk runs at a pace appropriate to the visitor, and is given by knowledgeable staff. To the left of the sculptures is a ruined village, home to some of the Wild's most famous residents. The ruins are a tangible reminder of the past, and many of the ruined buildings have been converted into comfortable accommodation. As you walk through the park, you'll notice that there are no trees, but there are at least a few species that grow naturally, and in many locations there is a dense mix of shrubs. The trees and shrubs have been carefully chosen to complement the moss which, in patches, can make the Wild an almost other-worldly place. The dense cover of moss is part of the key to the Park's success, blocking out the noise of the day and allowing enough light to filter through to the plants below. The park offers a wealth of wildlife, but most people enjoy the tranquility of the place at ground level. But if you'd like to see some of the creatures up close, the Wild's hides are open to the public. The

Q: Re-order MS Excel Month/Day/Year Calendar with VBA I am trying to re-order the months of the MS-Excel 2012 calendar in a way that, for example, Jan 1 would be on the first day of 2013, not the beginning of the month of January. I found other stackoverflow threads for this, but they all seem to just be replacing the months in the first place, which is exactly what I want to avoid. All of the code I found would change the month-order of the months, but I want to keep it the way it is. The code I found for this is found below. Perhaps I did the rest of the program wrong: Sub doit() Dim rng As Range Dim calendar As String Dim January As Integer Set rng = Selection calendar = rng.Cells(1) With Application January = Split(calendar, "Month")(1) If jan(January) > 6 Then jan = jan(January) + 1 rng = .Range("A" & jan & ":" & jan + 1 & ", " & _ "G" & jan & ", " & jan + 2 & ", " & _ "M" & jan & ", " & jan + 3 & ", " & _ "N" & jan & ", " & jan + 4 & ", " & _ "X" & jan & ", " & jan + 5 & ", " & _ "Z" & jan & ", " & jan + 6 & "") .Range
