I'm not sure if it's something in specific I'm doing that's breaking it, or if something is wrong with zeroe, but every time I try to download the recent files it still takes ages and then displays this: Starting server. ZeroCore.exe - logon I just started using Zero, so it's a new install, but it's worked for a while. A: I was facing a similar problem, but after this, server runs fine. In my case, I was failing to access the recent file list. I did a clean install, and installed Zero again. No other changes. Tried to access the recent files and it worked. Saving the Stable: Paying for the Maintenance of the Union State Aid to England's Public Service by Richard Layard March 1999, 5,127 words The authors argue that generous spending cuts by the Government are unlikely to help restore public services' finances. They instead offer a return to principle and argue that aid should be provided to the public service to compensate for cuts in public spending, particularly in Health and Education. From their focus on health and education as priority areas for the public sector, the authors also emphasize that the costs of health and education are likely to grow. To be effective, the public service should therefore be provided with a stable stream of income in order to maintain its ability to operate efficiently in the future. Public services are more important than ever. The success of their operations is vital to our wellbeing and the viability of our society. But like all public services, their costs are rising. By 1997 health expenditure was £50 billion – nearly twice the figure in 1980. The same was true for Education where the Treasury expenditure on schools is higher than in 1995. The Government’s spending reductions – financial “austerity” – are expected to result in additional cuts in the running costs of public services. The NHS will need £2 billion of additional financing in the next two years, for example. The authors argue that generous spending cuts by the Government are unlikely to help restore public services’ finances. Instead, they offer a return to principle and argue that aid should be provided to the public service to compensate for cuts in public spending. “We are in a position where we have to accept some public expenditure cuts as inevitable. This is not merely a political choice: it is also a moral imperative,” they
