This can be done from the user share point as shown in the image as well as from the share point web app that you used to create the document library. You may have to have admin rights and you may have to enable that web app for this to work. After you have done this, each time that you open the document library, you should see your new folder. A: I figured out a way to do this! It's a bit manual, but it works. Let me know if this helps. The following steps will allow you to move a folder to the root of the server instead of a sub-folder: In the document library that you are trying to move the folder to, click "Manage Content and Structure". Click on the box next to "Folder" Go to "Rights" and change the permission "Deny" to "Allow" Click on "Apply" Click on "Add" Now, click on the "gear" icon Go to the "Security" tab, click "Give permissions" and check "Full control" If you are not sure what to check, check "Full control", and then click on "OK" In the Document library click on "View All Files" in order to get a list of all the files in the folder you are trying to move From that list of files, choose the file that you want to move and drag it into the "New Folder" field Click on the "x" and then "OK" to finalize the folder Hope this helps! A: Yes, you're correct, moving to the root of the share point website (rather than a site level folder) can not be done with out of the box functionality.

For my purposes, and without the support of a partner or consultant, I would suggest actually recreating the folder structure at the root of the share point site. I would suggest creating a new site collection with the appropriate permissions, and then importing your files from the old structure into the new structure. Then you could do the usual web browser push/pull to sync the files between them. Southwick Castle Southwick Castle is a ruined castle located on Barrahire Island, in the lower Barrahire estuary, just north-east of Wick, Caithness, Scotland. The castle is an outstanding example of a motte-and-bailey

Note: I did manually search the Host name. It seems seems they are all from the same host. I don't know what is going on here. Could anyone help me on this? A: These are probably password protected exes, where the encryption algorithm is known to the attacker, and the attacker is attempting to crack the encrypted files to see if they can access the files. From your analysis they seems to be storage device or cloud files or protected cloud storage. There is a lot of useful information in the previous answer: How to decrypt 7zip encrypted files Follow these instructions step by step to get decryption working. Start - Start menu - Programs and Features - uncheck: Windows Live - Set up the firewall and only allow the sftp protocol and sftp specific ports to be opened (Disable the WPG or for all WPG networks)... - Disable the Windows firewall Run regedit.exe - Open Registry Editor - go to: HKLM\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\services\WinRM\Parameters Edit the Value: Protocols and ports (SP2) and add the single parameter string: Data Encryption Standard (AES) - Decrypt It's possible you may need to reboot the machine to activate the setting, it's not 100% sure for sure, but something to try. If it works then you will have to change:
HKLM\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\services\WinRM\Parameters For:
HKLM\SYSTEM\CurrentControlSet\services\WinRM\Parameters\Protocols You need to add to this setting (same as for Protocols & ports) the two new strings: ESP Then you will have to edit the setting in the Security Tab in the Local Policies Editor. Add a Rule: User must authenticate as a client - Client Then in the Action Tab, add a Rule: client must sign the credentials If you are sure that you didn't protect these files by encryption you can find the encryption algorithm. You can also find an info on the Web on how to get the decryption. A: Right-click on the item(s) containing the.exe and select the following: Properties->Compress/Uncompress On the left-hand side, you'll see a 'Compress' button and 6d1f23a050
