Fully automated systems should be preferred because they facilitate ease of use, improve system efficiency, decrease errors, and facilitate data gathering. Fully automated systems are often cost effective. It is also usually easier to achieve adequate staff training for fully automated systems. Do not rely on data entry clerks as a source of information for manual data gathering. The ACVS standards for enteral nutrition now recommended include a black box warning (Black box warning (black box): A warning in the labeling of a drug, biologic product, or device that states that serious or potentially life-threatening risks exist or that a risk exists that has not been fully evaluated. The FDA considers the black box warning to be a key feature of the precautions and warnings section of the warning. 5.1, 5.2).
