

Saving the most popular videos from the Internet is a breeze, thanks to the application Download Surgeon, which is compatible with Windows, Mac and Linux. The program contains three main components, namely the YT Downloader, the OS Downloader and the Sniffer Downloader, and each of them is well suited for a specific purpose. The YT Downloader gathers videos from the YouTube service, and the OS Downloader gathers videos from the rest of the Internet, including Facebook, DailyMotion, MetaCafe and others. Finally, the Sniffer Downloader finds videos from web pages, saving videos from particular websites automatically, whether they are embedded or external. The process of saving videos from the Internet is completely simple, and this application will allow you to grab and download any type of video or audio stream with the click of a button. Download Surgeon is able to record the video from the page, and the audio from any webpage, whether it is the YouTube website or any other. Accept Read More Q: Regular expression for matching occurrences of one string in another I am trying to write a regular expression that matches any occurrence of [1-9][0-9] in text. I can do this with the following regex `^[(1-9)(0-9)]/` But I'm unsure how to match any occurrence of the text [1-9][0-9] including the brackets. So I've tried the following `^[(1-9)(0-9)]/` `^[(1-9)(0-9)]/g` However both of these have no effect. I don't know if I'm just overlooking something really simple or if the brackets are the issue? A: Your regexes don't work because] and) are anchors, they make sure the match occurs at the beginning and end of the string. To match any occurrence of a character you need to use a quantifier: Quantifier: The quantifier restricts the number of characters in a single group. + Quantifier: Matches between one and unlimited times, as many times as possible, giving

Download Surgeon is an effective and reliable software solution developed to help you save videos or their corresponding audio stream, from various websites to your computer, including YouTube, Facebook, DailyMotion, SoundCloud and others. Intuitive and practical looks In terms of appearance, the application is very small and compact, occupying as little space as possible on your desktop, so you can easily work with it and other windows simultaneously. Download Surgeon's main window allows you to pick one of three different components, namely 'YT Downloader', 'OS Downloader' and 'Sniffer Downloader', each with distinct functionality. Swiftly save videos and songs from the web to your PC With the help of the 'YT Downloader', you can grab and save the video or audio stream from a YouTube link. The program identifies the available formats and qualities, letting you choose which to export to your computer. Alternately, using the 'OS Downloader', you can save songs and movies from other sites, such as Facebook, DailyMotion, Tumblr, MetaCafe, SoundCloud and many more, only requiring you to input the corresponding URL and choose the preferred output option. On the other hand, if the video you wish to grab does not have a URL address or you simply do not know how to obtain it, you can resort to the 'Sniffer Downloader', which will determine on its own when a video starts playing in a web browser and record it, allowing you to preview, then save it to your PC. A straightforward video grabber All in all, Download Surgeon proves to be a useful and practical utility that can help music enthusiasts obtain the latest songs and videos from the Internet, with no effort entailed. The process is quick and easy with minimal strain on the system resources or on you, so even if you're not used to similar tools, you will still be able to benefit from its functions.
